Description
This agricultural field in Katydata covers a generous 13,045 m² in the Nicosia district. It is set well outside the community centre, in a landscape-led setting away from dense urban development. The land brings two neighbouring fields together into a single holding.

The ground is sloping and the shape is irregular, as is typical of open rural land in this part of the district. Katydata is a small community surrounded by countryside, and the field sits within that open landscape. Together, the two fields form one sizeable piece of the Cypriot countryside.
