Description
Open land surrounds this sizeable field in Palaiometocho, a village with a strong sense of place. The village centre and its schools are a short drive away, and so is the nature spot of Lefkovounos for unhurried days outdoors. Covering 5,986 m², the land has a triangular outline and an even surface that slopes gently. Most of the field is zoned for residential use, and a smaller part is agricultural. The groundwork is already done: planning permission has been granted to divide the land into six plots, one of them on a corner. Instead of a blank page, you begin with a layout that has been approved. Picture the plots taking shape one by one, each with its own place in the village. Whether you follow the approved division or shape your own plans within the residential part, the field offers a flexible starting point. A generous stretch of village land with its division already approved, waiting for its next chapter.
