Description
In the residential quarter of Panagia Evangelistria in Dali, two pairs of semi-detached three-bedroom houses rise among neighbouring homes and open parcels of land. The town centre is a short drive away, and so is the ancient site of Idalion, a reminder of the long story behind this corner of Nicosia district.

Each house is planned as a family home of about 150 m² over two floors. Downstairs, an open-plan living and dining room flows to the kitchen, with a guest toilet close by. Upstairs are three bedrooms, one with its own en-suite, and a separate bathroom. An attic above adds extra room.

The houses are unfinished and at different stages. House A is almost complete, with ceramic floors, laminate parquet in the bedrooms, underfloor heating, double-glazed windows and provision for split units. House B is well advanced, while the remaining two stand at their structural frame.

With the layouts already drawn, the four homes can be completed to your own finish, in a residential part of Dali with the town and its history close at hand.
