Description
A short drive from the heart of Mitsero village, among homes and open parcels of land, a former restaurant waits for someone to bring its tables back to life. Agrokipia and Agioi Iliofotoi are a short drive away as well.

The main building was laid out for hospitality. It has a dining area with a stage, a bar, a kitchen, toilets, storage spaces, and staff changing rooms with their own toilets. A metal-frame extension on the north side once served as extra dining space. A canopy runs along the south side, and a shed covers the barbecue areas. A separate storage structure and a small metal-frame building also stand on the plot.

Outside, landscaping, paving and playgrounds fill the sizeable grounds. Picture a long evening meal under the canopy, with the smell of the barbecue in the air and children playing nearby. The plot has no direct road access.

With a restaurant layout already in place, inside and out, the premises give a clear starting point for a hospitality business in the setting of a Nicosia village.
