Description
Stone walls laid around 1935 give this four-bedroom house in Palaichori Oreinis a warm, welcoming character that newer homes rarely match. It sits within the village itself, with restaurants and cafés right next door and medical centres and pharmacies within walking distance. Neighbouring Palaichori Morfou can also be reached on foot, and Askas is a short drive away.

The accommodation spreads over two floors, and each one follows the same practical plan: an open-plan kitchen and living area, two bedrooms and a bathroom with a shower. This gives a flexible living arrangement, with room for a large family or for generations to share the house while keeping their own space. Covered verandas add comfortable outdoor living for slow mornings and long evenings.

The house was partly renovated around 2010. It is in fair condition, and work on the ground floor is under way. Schools, parks and public offices are all a short drive away.

The result is authentic Cypriot village life, lived among stone walls with real history.
