Description
In the residential heart of Tseri stands a traditional house of stone and mud brick, waiting for someone to bring it back to life. Its pitched roof of clay tiles and its earthy walls speak of village building as it used to be, and its listed status carries that character forward.

The house sits on a plot of 381 m², with 120 m² of covered space. As a listed building, it qualifies for a subsidy that can be claimed towards restoring the structure. That support could help a careful renovation honour the original stone and tiles while shaping the rooms around the way you want to live.

Everyday life is close at hand. Cafés and restaurants are within an easy stroll, the village primary school is close by, and Lakatameia and Latsia are a short drive away for everything else. Homes line the streets around it, giving the neighbourhood a settled, residential feel with a more measured pace.

This is a house with a story already written into its walls, set in a village where daily comforts are never far. Well worth a visit.
